WINERY TOURS AND TASTINGS

WHERE THE WORLD FAMOUS WINE IS MADE...

A mysterious labyrinth system of cellars winds beneath the region's villages. This is where Tokaj wines are matured, the most outstanding of which is Tokaj aszú. Many historical figures, from Louis XIV to Goethe and Beethoven, have been fans of the drink. Many wineries and cellars in the area offer a behind-the-scenes look at wine production and winemaking, which is best crowned with a wine tasting.

Patrícus Wine House

Distance from Tarcal: 12 km (12 minutes)

Combining the richness of eight historic first-class vineyards, the 85-hectare estate's centre in Bodrogkisfalud, in the Várhegy vineyard, was built by converting the manorial press house featured in the 1867 Tokaj-Hegyalja Album, and now includes a modern gravity-flow winery built in organic style, perfectly reflecting the coexistence of tradition and modernity in the World Heritage landscape.

The ageing cellar with its 1.8km of passages is one of the oldest and longest cellar systems in the area, parts of which were built in the 15th century.

Disznókő Vineyard and Winery

Distance from Tarcal: 5,6 km (7 minutes)

The Disznókő estate takes its name from the Disznókő "vineyard", the first known written record of which dates back to 1413. The name 'Disznókő' refers to a large 'boar-shaped rock' in the heart of the estate, or according to some geographers, more accurately to the shape of the vineyard hill. The land, which produced exceptional quality wine, was once owned by noble families. Thanks to the knowledge accumulated over the decades and the experience gained in the production of Tokaj aszú, Disznókő is now considered a pioneer in the rebirth of great Tokaj wines.

Fermented and sometimes matured mainly in barrels with minimal intervention and inoculated with yeast, the 10-12,000 bottles of wine produced each year often include seven to eight different types of wine, from dry cuvées and varietal wines to sweet, late-harvest wines, Samorodni, turnovers and aszú.
